That's perfect. Similar to Dept Homeland Security and other agencies.
After more than 2 decades of business in this kind of area, it's easy to spot a dirtbag either in person or via phone/email. Other folks new in the business may have a harder time. Self-regulating (with intelligence) is the key to avoiding chemicals falling into the wrong hands. [redacted] from what I've seen.

From what I can tell, the retailers would have the most exposure/risk. The distributors sell to licensed dealers/stores so that's not a big concern in my mind. The stores that sell to "Joe-Blow" are the ones who could use the flyer. May I send out this flyer to new dealers [redacted]

You can see the dilemma. [redacted] can try.

Here's proof that [redacted] as it is designed, can't start a fire, even if it's got a tank of gasoline on top of it. The video was made by a Native American in Washington State who is [redacted] targets making false claims.

Anything I can do to help prevent some weirdness, just email or call. I'm always here.

In case you need additional briefing material for meetings w/ management (and also because your [redacted] rating official) - The Exploding Targets Awareness Card is completed.

As part of our outreach efforts to exploding target (ET) companies, I asked [redacted] to head-up a project to develop an ET awareness card. The drafted card went through a vetting process with the ET company owners, the [redacted] Legal, OPA, and NJTTF. Now, its ready for print and distribution. [redacted] done a great job on this project.

Thanks much for the note. The industry we are attempting to reach is the exploding targets industry: both retailers who disseminate the product, as well as the manufacturers who bear responsibility for their product and on occasion sell their product directly.

We are attempting to prevent the use of these as explosives for nefarious purposes. I put the photos in because I thought they demonstrated how these targets can be misused. If that's unclear, any suggestions how we might make it clearer?

I have also reviewed the other tripwire indicator cards and found no conflict, they actually repeat a lot of the same indicators and information – this is just targeted at an emerging industry.

In reviewing your Exploding Target Outreach Card, what industry is this focused on and how will it be disseminated? In addition, it is not clear what particular act we are trying to prevent in the photos.

[redacted] not a problem I was surprised to see it so soon. To answer your question I think it looks good and the wording is appropriate, however I think you would still need some sort of training aid for the retail managers to go with the flyer or you might be getting allot of phone calls with either questions or concerns that would bind things up on your end. Then again you guys are the experts. I hope this helped and I'm ready to get this information out when you guys are ready.

Want to get your thoughts on either of these documents. Let us know if it is something you would find useful handing out to your retailers. Apologies for the delay – these take a ton of coordination...

Thanks much for your help in this.

Each indicator is by itself lawful conduct or behavior and may also constitute the exercise of rights guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. In addition, there may be a wholly innocent explanation for conduct or behavior that appears suspicious in nature. For this reason, no single indicator should be the sole basis for law enforcement action. The totality of behavioral indicators and other relevant circumstances should be evaluated when considering any law enforcement response or action.
